What is the Campaign for the World’s Libraries?

The Campaign for the World's Libraries is a public education campaign of the International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions (IFLA) and the American Library Association (ALA) and libraries around the world to speak loudly and clearly about the value of libraries and librarians in the 21st century. It is designed to showcase the unique and vital roles played by libraries, of all types, worldwide.

The Campaign for the World's Libraries was launched in August 2001 during the IFLA Council and General Conference in Boston.

It is based on The Campaign for America's Libraries, a multi-year public awareness and advocacy campaign sponsored by the American Library Association and libraries across the U.S. The U.S. campaign and uses a trademarked brand - @yourlibrary - to unify the communications activities of libraries across the country.

The Campaign for the World’s Libraries also uses the slogan and its official translations (on the cover of the guide) to unify the communications activities of libraries around the world. Below is the Campaign in the official IFLA languages.

@yourlibrary

What Can the Campaign Do?

The Campaign for the World’s Libraries helps library associations and libraries to:

• raise awareness about the variety of programs and services offered;
• increase use of libraries at schools, at colleges and universities, in government, at work, and in daily community life;
• increase funding for libraries;
• involve librarians as stakeholders on public policy issues such as intellectual freedom, equity of access and the "digital divide;"
• encourage librarianship as a profession.
Through outreach efforts the Campaign can speak to:

- general public -- parents, children, students, senior citizens and business people;
- educators, school groups and administrators;
- government leaders, policymakers and opinion leaders;
- librarians and those who are considering the library profession;
- media;
- strategic partners, including funding agencies.

Why Participate?

Libraries around the world need to promote themselves to get support from users, administrations, and government officials. Libraries need to promote themselves increase funding for resources that will allow the libraries to provide them much needed services to their citizens.

Library associations need to help make this happen!

The Campaign for the World’s Libraries can help you do this!

The Campaign for the World’s Libraries can be used by libraries associations, big and small, take advantage of a global campaign that provides you the ability to use the resources and knowledge already created by other countries to create your own campaign.

To create an advocacy and promotional campaign on your own is difficult

Participating in the Campaign from the World’s Libraries means you are part of a global campaign that has already shown that it can help library associations and libraries in their quest for visibility and support.

- The Campaign allows you to adapt and modify successful activities already created in other countries to promote your own campaign.
- The Campaign allows you to network and learn from others around the world on how they have used the Campaign
• The Campaign helps library associations show that libraries are dynamic places, places of opportunity, and bridges to the world.

• The Campaign allows you to reach out to others to help fund and support the campaign, as in the case of Mexico, where the, the Association of Mexican Librarians (AMBAC) was able to get the Ministry of Culture paid for the printing and distribution of 16,000 Library Advocacy Handbooks to librarians all around the country.

• The Campaign gives you a platform to recruit celebrities such as the President or famous authors, as the Republic of Georgia did, to provide their name or support to help you promote libraries.

• The Campaign helps to increase use of libraries. Targeted campaigns in Australia helped increase circulation by 10% in one State.

How Does The Campaign Work?

The Campaign is based on the Brand- \textit{@yourlibrary} such as \textbf{Educate Yourself @yourlibrary}

In English the @ sign means ‘at’.

This brand, translated into the language(s), of your country is used like slogans that corporations such as Coca-Cola or McDonald’s use that become recognized by people.

The brand has already been translated into over 25 languages!

The brand is very flexible and can be used to promote all of the services or messages you would like to use. We understand that in some languages the translation of the brand needs to be modified somewhat to make it work, and that is fine.

Library Associations should use the brand at all possible opportunities by putting it on their stationary, reports, conference logos, etc. to help turn it into your brand.
Here are some examples of how individual libraries are able to use it to promote either specific library services or to encourage people to visit the library.

Saskatchewan Library Association (Canada)

State Libraries of Australia
How to Participate?

To become part of the Campaign for the World’s Libraries, the library association of the country or region needs to agree to participate.

This usually means a discussion by the Executive Board or Executive Committee of the Association, who would make the decision to officially join the Campaign. Sometimes this is preceded by a discussion with other key committees or other leaders in librarianship to make sure that all key members of the profession are in favor. The Association President then should sign the trademark agreement at the end of this Guide and send it to IFLA Headquarters.

The Association then begins the process to start a Campaign in your country or region that the Association and libraries can use to promote their importance and value to society.

How to Start A Campaign?

Create A Plan

To be successful the association needs to create a plan for the campaign which will outline what are the goals and objectives of the campaign, who are the audiences for the campaign, what are the key messages. The Uruguay Library Association created a very good plan that is used as an example

Action Plan

1. Define Goals and Objective
2. Determine Your Audience
3. Develop Messages
4. Identify Tasks
5. Find Resources
6. Get The Message Out
7. Evaluate

1. Goals and Objectives

The Association needs to first define defined goals and objects. Sample goals can be:

From Uruguay

- To inform the general public, particularly the political powers of the importance of the libraries as an instrument of democratic access to information, as a mechanism of education and scientific development of the community, as a tool during decision making

- To publicize the diversity of services and wealth of information of the libraries in Uruguay

It also can have the following internal objectives for your association:

- Develop a campaign that represents and is useful to all types of libraries;
- Create tools, resources and materials that could be utilized by all types of libraries;
- Provide an opportunity to share public relations/marketing/advocacy best practices within the library community;
- Tie together promotions into one unified brand, reinforcing key messages;
- Quickly respond to emerging issues such as library funding cuts;
- Promote the contribution of all library staff, including both librarians and support staff;
- Seek increased foundation and sponsor funding to expand Campaign activities;
- Conduct public opinion research to refine and expand Campaign messages on an ongoing basis; and
- Increase coordination with other public relations and marketing efforts, such as READ posters, National Library Week, Library Card Sign-up Month, etc.

Additionally, The Campaign is a key part of ALA’s overall advocacy efforts and helps to create an environment in which advocates at the local, state and national level can help drive improvement in critical areas. Specifically, the Campaign fulfills the public awareness piece of ALA’s advocacy plan, which also includes legislative, local, state and international advocacy.

Critical areas include:
Increased library usage;
Positive professional recruitment impact;
Stronger commitment to funding at national, state and local levels; and
More receptive public policy involving libraries.

Target Audiences

One of the challenges the campaign faces is the diversity of audiences to which it must speak. Each ALA member organization has different needs and will be inclined to prioritize the audiences for the campaign differently. "Tailored" campaigns address these needs, providing the structure for maximizing the outreach to each audience. These target audiences have been identified:

First: General public, including users and non-users;
Second: Decision makers and those who influence them;
Third: Allies and partners;
Fourth: Audiences identified by "targeted" campaigns:

- Undergraduate and graduate students, faculty, researchers, college/university administrators (Academic and Research Library Campaign);
- Teachers and administrators, students and parents, and boards of education (School Library Campaign);
- Funders and policy makers, business and community leaders, parents and non-parents 20 to 30 years of age, seniors, new Americans, teens (Public Library Campaign);
- Children in grades k-4, parents/caregivers, school administrators, teachers, school library media specialists (Kids! @ your library Campaign).

Key Messages

Below are key messages and talking points for your use in communicating about The Campaign for America's Libraries and the value of libraries and librarians in your community.

Libraries are changing and dynamic places.

Librarians are trained experts, on the forefront of the information age. In a world that's information rich, they are information smart and help ensure a society where everyone is literate as well as “information literate.”

Libraries are places of opportunity.

Libraries are part of the American dream. They are a place for education and self-help. And because they offer free and open access to all, they bring opportunity to all.
Libraries bring you the world.

Libraries also help you make sense of the world. Where else can you have access to nearly anything on the Web or in print as well as trained professional service and assistance in finding it – and interpreting it?

These messages were developed after substantial internal research among ALA members, a review of public opinion research and external research among consumers. The messages meet the following criteria:

Convey what is unique about libraries.
The messages distinguish the unique role that libraries play in our society versus that of perceived "competitors," mega-bookstores and the Internet.

Communicate about librarians as well as libraries.
The campaign's messages are designed to ensure that target audiences know that today's librarian is a well-trained, technology-savvy, information expert who can enrich the learning process of any library user — from early reader to graduate student to young Web surfer to retiring senior citizen.

Be important and relevant for both internal and external audiences.
The messages not only resonate with external audiences, but also have been — and must continue to be — embraced by the internal library community as well.

Be broad in scope and adaptable to the diversity of libraries involved in the campaign.
