Shelves to Servers: Digital Content in Libraries and Archives

An IFLA side event taking place in conjunction with the 32nd meeting of the Standing Committee on Copyright & Related Rights (SCCR) at the World Intellectual Property Organization

Wednesday May 11 2016, 13:30 – 14:45

Room B

A light sandwich lunch will be provided

The information revolution is based in large part on the rapid rise of digital content. As institutions central to the information environment, libraries and archives now operate more in the digital world than in the physical.

Digital content offers many opportunities for libraries and their users – teachers, researchers, creators, and citizens – to find and use works that were previously beyond their reach. New possibilities come with significant challenges. This discussion will look at the reality of digital content in libraries and archives, and the issues that go to the essence of stakeholder discussions on the global copyright system.

Speakers include:

- Victoria Owen, Chief Librarian University of Toronto Scarborough
- Victoria Stobo, Copyright Policy Advisor to the Scottish Council of Archives
- Alicia Ocaso, President, Uruguayan Association of Librarians

The panel will be moderated by: Winston Tabb, Dean of University Libraries and Museums, The Johns Hopkins University (US) and Head of IFLA Delegation

Interpretation: English, French and Spanish*
