GUIDANCE ON THE SUBMISSION OF MANUSCRIPTS

Submission
Material for potential publication in the online proceedings should be sent by email attachment to the editors in Word format. The editors are Eileen Breen ebreen@emeraldinsight.com and Please send no later than 15 March 2015. This is imperative because the timelines for receipt and editing of manuscripts are very tight: in order to ensure publication and delivery of the proceedings to attendees at the satellite conference.

IFLA policies
Online publication will be in the IFLA repository. Please see here http://library.ifla.org/policies.html for the conditions. Authors of papers and reports to be included in the proceedings, will be required upon acceptance to complete an IFLA Author Permission Form.

Writing style
Referees are asked to examine writing style as well as content. It is therefore important that authors take care in submitting a manuscript that is written in plain language and adheres to published guidelines. (see latest Fowler’s Modern English Usage, and G.M. Hall’s How To Write a Paper).

Authors should:

• Aim at simplicity
• Focus on the main topic
• Use familiar words
• Use short paragraphs
• Avoid unnecessary words especially adjectives
• Use active verbs
• Use headings to break up text
• Pay attention to grammar and punctuation
• Remember that they will be writing for people whose first language may not be English
• Where abbreviations are used, they should appear in full followed by abbreviation/acronym in brackets e.g. National Health Service (NHS); thereafter initials only may be used.

We request that authors take care in preparing their manuscripts. For authors who are not writing in their first language, we suggest that you have the manuscript proof-read very carefully prior to submission, preferably by somebody whose first language is English.
