Invitation for Expressions of Interest from potential host countries for the 12th International Congress on
Medical Librarianship (ICML)
2017

December 2012
Introduction

About the Congress

The IFLA Health and Biosciences Section [H&B] invites expressions of interest to host the 12th International Congress on Medical Librarianship [ICML] in 2017. The ICML takes place in a city selected through a competitive process.

The Congress normally attracts 500+ attendees from around the world.

The host organisation will be responsible for the congress budget which will be generated from delegate registrations, exhibition sales, sponsorship and industry and government support. There will be no funding from IFLA.

The Congress programme runs over several days, including tours, continuing education seminars and a trade exhibition. The host organisation is responsible for working with the Congress Planning Committee [CPC].

Expressions of interests with all required information should be submitted by 31 January 2013 to Mr Brian Galvin, Chair, IFLA Health & Biosciences Section; email bgalvin@hrb.ie
Please include in the email subject field “Confidential – ICML 2017 Expression of Interest”.

About ICML

The first ICML was held in London by leaders from medical libraries not long after World War II. Around this period the Armed Forces Medical Library (USA) was being transformed and would eventually become the National Library of Medicine in 1956. Topics included library education, administration and operations, the high costs of journals and the history of medicine. UNESCO had established an international exchange of publications in medical libraries which was helping those countries impacted by war to re-establish medical library services. At the inaugural meeting the “difficult state of libraries in Asia, Africa, Australia and Latin America was of great concern”.
