

navigational help

This document is in two sections : "texts" and "illustrations".

texts

Click on one of the titles in the list of texts. The corresponding text is displayed on the screen, with its title bar above and its navigation bar below.

The navigation bar allows you to :

 home	 navigation	 texts	 illustrations	 print
return to the home page	call up navigation help	call up another text (the one you have just consulted will appear shaded in the list)	view the illustrations	print the text in Acrobat PDF format

Each text is accompanied by a detailed hypertext summary on the left of the screen. The blue arrows indicate the presence of a second level : by clicking on the ► arrow you can scroll through the summary ; by clicking on the ▼ arrow you can minimise it. By clicking on one of the blue titles you can display the contents of that heading.

The icon on the title bar changes according to whether it refers to :

 the text	 the bibliography	 standards	 web sites
--	--	---	---

Hypertext links in the text are blue like those in the summary.

Words in red are defined in the glossary. Place the mouse pointer over the word to see its definition appear in a bubble. The bubble disappears as soon as the mouse pointer is moved to another area.

The images selected to illustrate the text may be enlarged. Click on one of the thumbnail images. Use the ◀ and ▶ buttons to move back to the preceding image or forward to the following one, and the ↶ button to return to the text.

N.B. : In order to print the texts in PDF format, you need Adobe Acrobat Reader 4, which you can install from the CD-ROM (see "installation instructions" in the booklet).

illustrations

In this section, you can look at the illustrations by searching with keywords. Click on one or several terms and validate your request whenever you want to look at the images with their notices.

At any time you may activate a context-sensitive help by clicking on the  button.

N.B. : The search engine for the illustrations requires Macromedia Shockwave™ Player which you can install from the CD-ROM (see "installation instructions" in the booklet).

The navigation bar at the bottom of the screen allows you to :

quit

Use the normal Quit function of the HTML browser to end "Safeguarding our documentary heritage".
