Staff numbers have grown

September 2013 with international experts from NZ, and UK House of Commons

CREATING A RESEARCH SERVICE IN 2014

Key Outcomes in 2014

- There are now research services available for MPs in the Hluttaw, with the assistance of the House of Commons project
- The new research services had a direct impact on the behaviour and effectiveness of some MPs
- It was slower than anticipated to support the necessary skills improvements in the researchers.
- More work was needed in 2015 to continue the development of research services in the Hluttaw.

Project approach

The long-term placement of the House of Commons parliamentary research specialist to manage the project, train staff and support the establishment of the research service, with a skilled project officer/interpreter, appears to have been a successful approach.

Project approach – key elements

- a strong focus on workplace-based training, with researchers working on research work for MPs
- a strong focus on individual and small group coaching and mentoring
- a tailored workshop programme (54 workshops on research and professional skills have been conducted from January to December 2014)

Key elements of project approach continued

- the agreement of a Research Service Development Action Plan with Hluttaw managers to guide activities

- support for research managers, such as through the development of management guidelines, to develop the management of research services and to promote its long-term sustainability

Launch of Research Service – May 2014

- the launch of research services to enable research staff to develop their skills on real research tasks, while also satisfying a strong demand from MPs for specialist support

Service Delivery

- Two of the three Hluttaw now have functional research services
- 18 Research Briefings on topical political issues and legislation were prepared

- Confidential enquiries for MPs, Committees and senior staff:
 - 114 enquiries answered by November 2014 on subjects such as international development loans to the Government; domestic violence laws; economic development; dam construction; and land law reform.

CONSOLIDATING THE RESEARCH SERVICE IN 2015

Key outcomes in 2015

- Research services are now being guided by a Hluttaw Research Service Annual Work Plan
- Positive feedback was received from MPs about the services
- All 3 Hluttaws/Houses now have a Research Service and published Guides on how to use the Research Service

Project approach

- the piloting of new services to enable staff to develop their skills on real tasks
- support for managers to promote the long-term sustainability of research services

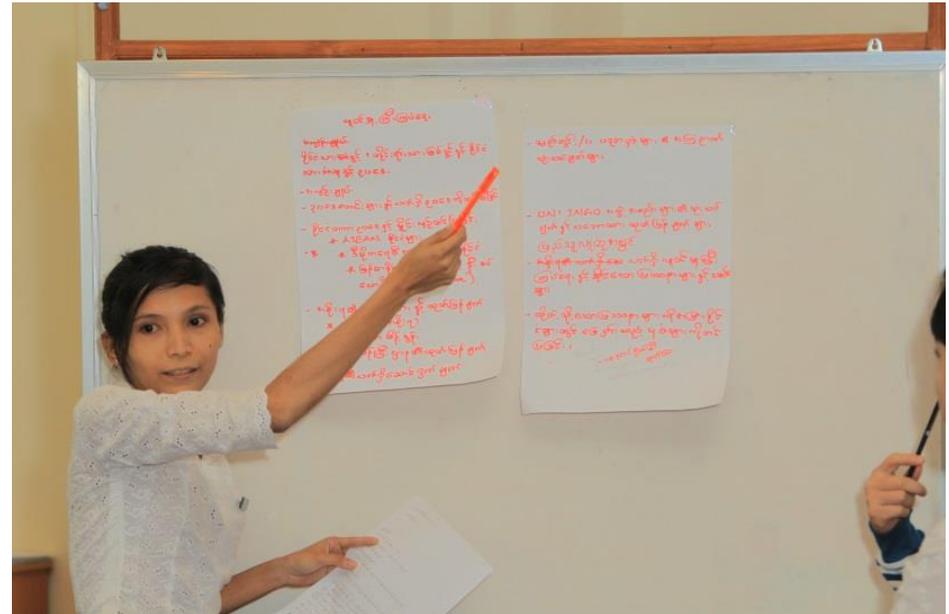

Research Services statistics

- 25 Research Briefings were published in the first six months of 2015 (up from 17 in 2014)
- The uptake of Research Briefings by MPs remains high. 4460 individual paper copies were taken by Members
- Overall enquiry numbers across the three Hluttaw have more than doubled from 114 in the year 2014, to 120 for the first six months of 2015

Staffing and management

- Staffing levels increased to 41 to deliver more service
- Research Managers have developed service standards and training plans and are coaching their research teams
- Good processes for work flow management, editing and proof reading are now in place.

LOOKING AHEAD

Research Managers study trip

- Research Managers will visit the House of Commons for 2 weeks in October
- Intensive mentoring and on the job observation of a mature Research Service

Preparing for the 2016 Parliament

- Key Issues Briefings
- Planning to welcome new MPs and brief them about Research Services
